Smothers Was Drunk

Joe Smothers, whose attempt to gain entrance to the residence of Mrs. Suc Wright, was published in this paper last week, was tried before the mayor on Saturday. It was clearly proven by a number of reliable witnesses that Joe was very drunk on the night he tried to enter the door of Mrs. Wright and believing that the negro simply dido't know where he was, at the time the offence was committed the mayor imposed a fine of only $6 for being drunk and disorderly.

The Bradshaw Fight.

A serious difficulty occurred at Rice's Depot last Friday between J. S. Bradshaw, Hermon Bradshaw, J. W. Brad shaw and W. P. Bradshaw. The first named is a Democrat while it is said the other three are Republicans, and the fight is reported to have grown out of the illegal voting of Hermon Bradshaw who was accused by his uncle, J. Alleged Fiendish Assault Upon a Little Girl.

Pleasants Woodson, a negro man about 45 years old is in jail charged with the beinous crime of criminally assaulting his eleven-year-old stepdaughter, in a body of woods on the farm of Mr. Hazelgrove within a mile of the corporate limits of this town. On Wednesday afternoon a preliminary hearing was given the negro before Justice R. M. Bidgood and the prisoner was sent on to await action of the grand jury. The little girl's injuries were examined by Dr. J. L. White and Dr. Winston, but neither testified before the justice since the evidence of the girl herself and the prisoner was quite sufficient to justify the decision to have the grand jury take the case.

The girl's testimony, though given with much hesitancy, as if a dreadful fear was over her, was so straightfoward as that all were impressed with its truthfulness.

The prisoner made a statement which was a simple denial of the charge. He said when he heard the little girl complaining of severe pains he hurried to own and saw Dr. Winston who gave aim some medicine for her, and she seemed to "mend" so fast that he had thought no more of the matter until arrested by Mr. Orange that day.

The mother of the child said the girl was telling an untruth on Woodson, and in every way possible in her testimony she shielded the man from the charge made against him. The case will come up in the county court.

Virginians Distinguished.

The Washington correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch writing of the Peace Jublee held in that city last week alludes as follows to Dr. W. E. Anderson, of Farmville:

Two Virginians were honored with functions of decided distinction. One of these was Colonel W. R. Teller, of the Metropolitan Hotel, and the other Captain William E. Anderson, of companied the President to the fireworks on Tuesday night, was so very much pleased with the exhibition that she insisted on going again last night The President, owing to previous engagements, could not go, and Colonel Teller was selected as a committee of one to escort the first lady of the land to the President's box at the fireworks. and back to the White House, which duty he performed with all the grace and gallantry of a true Virginia gentleman.

Dr. Anderson, who was an assistant surgeon in the Second Virginia Regiment, with the rank of captain, was one of the aides-de-camp on General Hawley's staff during the military parade on Tuesday. The Doctor is noted as one of the finest looking officers in the service-tall, well proportioned, and handsome-and in uniform or in civil attire, a gallant and chivalrous gentleman. General Hawley dined his staff, after which they attended the President's reception, Dr. Anderson being accorded the distinguished honor of escorting Miss Hawley to the White House, attending her throughout the ceremonies incident to the occasion, and back to the Arlington.

The Doctor should, by all means, be retained in the military service, and Colonel Teller, Democrat though he is, should get a fat cousulship.

The first Sunday of June is flower day for prisons in the State of Ohio. Beautiful observance. Did you ever send a flower to the jail of Prince Edward? We don't mean as a reward for crime but as a solace for a criminal.

Let "everybody" attend Hampden-Sidney commencement this year. The students give emphasis to attractive commencement exercises. Without a crowd they cannot be made so. Hampden-Sidney is a friend of Prince Edward and deserves all the attention she can give her.

It was a deservedly high compliment this government paid Dr. George T. Vaughan in sending him as its representative to the Tuberculosis Congress at Berlin. We note from the Disputch of Sunday that on Saturday last Dr. Vaughan read a paper on "The Cilmatic Treatment of Turberculosis," Mrs. Vaughan accompanied the doctor across the water.

One of the chief charms of Salt Lake City, we are told, is found in the abundance of shade trees fringing its streets. Why should any city be treeless? Or any community? Farmville has greatly improved in that regard of late years, and yet there is room for more. If each of us would only plant one tree a year and then care for it, our town would soon become a thing of beauty.

We believe that if something isn't done to better the public road from Farmville to Hampden-Sidney before another winter's reign of mud, the project said to be on foot to remove the college from Prince Edward will be pushed to a successful termination. We do not believe, however, that our people will let the argument of bad roads be used as a reason for carrying Hampden-Sidney from our borders.

Somebody has said: "One is just as happy looking into another person's move Hampden-Sidney to Richmond garden as owning one one's self." That depends on whose garden it is, and the tution to the Union Theological Semicondition of the vegetation therein. If one looks into the garden of Mrs. of the Medical colleges here forming a Geo. RICHMOND WANTS THE COLLEGE.

Plan to Remove Hampden-Sidney College-The Details as Yet Unknown. (Richmond Times of Mat.)

There is a reasonable prospect of Richmond having another large institution of learning, if reports be correct. Even now it is understood that there is a movement gradually shaping itself with the ultimate object of having Hampden-Sidney college re moved from its present location in though Benjamin Harrison secured a Prince Edward county to a site either in or near this city.

Efforts were made yesterday to learn some information in regard to the contemplated removal, but no details of the plan could be learned, and nobody who was seen on the subject would admit having any definite information as to the proposition to remove the institution.

It is understood, however, that the olan has been contemplated by a number of prominent Presbyterians in Virginia for some time, and especially by well known men of the Presbyterian church here, and it is thought that risk of appearing dull and uninterestsome of those who feel an interest in the matter are only waiting for a start to be made in order to join in and take part in the work of bringing about the removal.

When the Presbyterian General Assembly recently held here adopted the report of the committee on Christian Education to establish and maintain parochial schools under the influence of the Presbyterian church, attention was directed to the idea of having Hampden-Sidney brought to Richmond and established as an institution as enunciated by Jefferson means Hands. to be maintained under Presbyterian among the men the triumph of one of minds of a number of leading Presby terians here that Hampden-Sidney would make an excellent feeder for Union Theological Seminary, and might be made practically a Presby- the women are more than an important terian school. This idea has been element in our national life and intelliprivately discussed among several prom- gence. pent men who feel interested in the welfare and success of both institutions and it is understood that some of the alumni of Hampden-Sidney here are in favor of working up a movement to bring about the removal. It is argued that Richmond, by reason of its central location and large number of young men to draw on as students in the college, is far better suited as a location. It is also claimed that if the institution should be brought here the number of patrons and friends, as well as the number of students, would be largely increased. It is said that an excellent location could be secured in Richmond or just outside of the city on very liberal terms and conditions, and there are whispers that several gentlemen of means have manifested an interest in the enterprise. It is believed that the removal of this old and honored institution of learning would be a big thing for the educational advantages of this city. It would bring a good deal of money to Riehmond, and would do a great deal towards the advancement of the culture of this community.

At this time nothing can be stated as to the location of the college in the event that it should be brought here, It is stated, however, that those who are interested in the movement are going to take steps in the near future looking to the consideration of some plan by which the matter may begin to take definite shape.

There is, meantime, in the minds of some well known citizens in Virginia an idea that contemplates a far more extensive educational enterprise than the one mentioned above. It is to renary and combine them both with one

Present Day Thoughts.

BY "NEMO." The Consent of the Governed, -Figares are useful sometimes, particularly when figures are reliable and rash statements are unreliable. Now, according to the census of 1890 there were in this the total vote east for all parties was 12,059,350, or considerably less than one-fifth of the entire population of Again, according to the census of 1890 the number of males of voting age that year was 16,940,311, representing about one-fourth of the population.

Very nearly five million of these failed to vote in 1892. Look at the matter another way. the 62,000,000 over thirty million were female, leaving a balance of thirty-two million males, of whom, as I have said before, only 12,000,000 voted. There is another way to look at the matter. The votes for Grover Cleveand were 5,556,918 or only 380,810 more than the votes east for Benjamin Harrison. It is also right to point out that Cleveland's total vote and the total for several years, and last fall had a vote cast for all other candidates shows that 6,502,432 voters were opposed to Cleveland; a greater number, in fact. han all those who voted for him.

If now it is fair to say that a vote is an unfailing evidence of the consent of the governed, then there were more people opposed to the successful candidate than there were people who consented to his government. Furthermore, if a vote be the unfailing method of learning a people's will then against Mr. Cleveland's five million supporters one must set the whole fifty-seven million who did not vote for him. Yet the will of the five million impressed upon the fifty-seven million the form of government they would have for four years. The unvoting majority did not interfere with the triumph of the five million and a half.

Furthermore, so strangely does our electoral system work that in 1888 hundred thousand votes less than Mr. Cleveland, yet Mr. Harrison was elect-

These figures are not introduced as having any political bearing, but because both of the elections mentioned come the nearest to the last census. Now figures do not lie, unless it is a liar who uses them; and assuming that my readers have not found me to belong to that category of evildoers, I shall make one or two deductions from the figures that have been given in the preceding paragraphs, and, even at the ing, hold the attention of the reader down to certain facts of our national life. This is with the intention of making one point clear-that the conent of the governed is learned in an orderly nation by some other method than a universal vote. This is so with us for it has been shown that at the last election of Mr. Cleveland only about one-eleventh of the national strength declared itself in his favor at the polls. Does not our past history show that the consent of the governed ilt of the defeated? Among the women there is practically no voice at all that expresses itself in a public way either in one direction or another, yet

It fills one with pride to remember how quiet and orderly is our national life, in relation to national questions though the greater number of us are always and forever prevented from being upon the winning side. A Central American republic is different, for there the true principles of government are not understood. Our voiceless women and our equally voiceless children and even our defeated men live contentedly under a form of political belief that they did not uphold. As a working government founded upon declarations that thrill the heart we find that the government goes calmly on its way and its members live contentedly under it, though only a small fraction carry out the declaration made by our ancestors. The practical result up to the present of government by the people of the most intelligent, most liberty loving republic in the world is that four-fifths of the governed give their consent solely by being content.

This line of argument, it is hardly necessary to explain, is introduced to show the partial unreasonableness of some of our thinkers who are crying aloud for the consent of the governed in the Philippines and yet have in this country nothing that even approximately approaches it. What I pointed out a year ago when the war was on. is still true, that the better spirit of a nation that has been harrassed and despitefully used because of the colonial greed and the grand spirit of its oppressors will rise in grateful recognition of even the shadow of a shade of justice. mercy and truth, as shown by our representatives in governmental posiand establish it as a preparatory insti- tions. For them to live contentedly, for them to learn to toll instead of to ravage, for them to yield to the restraining decencies of civilized life, for them -both men and women-to recognize in their new helpers, not tyrants but men who make life for them a little more hopeful and religion a little more liberal-this will be for all practical purposes of government the consent of the governed, sufficient until such a time as we can find a workable method of giving the franchise to our new proteges.
